Q.10. What does the finally() method on promise do? Provide your explanation.

Ans:- The finally() method returns a Promise. When the promise is settled, that is either fulfilled or rejected, the specified callback function is executed. This provides a way for code to be run whether the promise was fulfilled successfully or rejected once the Promise has been dealt with. This helps to avoid duplicating code in both the promise's then() and catch() handlers.